If you are planning to drive around Lithuania, you need this map. If you are not familiar with Michelin maps, then you will likely be impressed with the overall legibility and informativeness of this map. It contains a grid with typical travel times between major cities, as well as distances between points on the roads themselves. The place names actually match what you would find on a road sign, and the folding allows you to easily display only the part you need without awkward refolding and destroying the map. I drove 2000+ km with this and my smartphone over the course of three weeks. Google Maps for Android does not have navigation yet in Lithuania, so I used this for route planning, and the GPS enabled Google Map to show my location in real time. I never once got lost. The map itself held up well over the course of the trip. I will certainly be using it again in two years when I return, or I will buy a newer version if one is available. Michelin has always been my favorite map company, and I was very glad was able to deliver this in time for my trip.
