Amazing Journey by a more amazing family. I'm only half way through the book but felt compelled to write my first review ever. The book itself is a wonderful picture of life traveling with a family but more than that an inspiration to put some adventure into your own life. The writing is inspirational, the photography is amazing and the messages applicable to all of us. My wife and I have taken to reading one blog per day and discussing it as an inspired way to start the day.. It really like no other book or travel log that I have seen and so not possible to compare it to anything but itself and by itself, it's a gem.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. This reads like a journal meets a travel guide and leaves you longing to grab your family and your passports!1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. My favourite book in 2015By CustomerThis book is a little bit of everything. I have used it as a journal, as a teacher and as a source of inspiration. The photos and writing are exceptional and I cannot wait to give it as gifts.

Nearly three years ago, the Mariotti family decided to sell all of their belongings and hit the road. With three young children, ages 5, 8, and 9, they have traveled to 22 countries and counting. The real journey has been in becoming intentionally adventurous parents, students, and observers of the world. This book is a memoir, travel companion, and journal all in one. It is a story and an invitation, but beware - once you engage in this journey there is no finish line. Are you ready to live it? At the end of each story you will find a practice called a livit. These exercises are designed to facilitate your journey to live more deliberately. They are intended to be there when you need them and do not need to be completed in any particular order. When you feel inspired, open to any practice and watch your day unfold in ways you never expected.
