Matt Brown : London Night Day: The Insider's Guide to London in 24 Hours before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised London Night Day: The Insider's Guide to London in 24 Hours:

London is open for business (and fun!) 24/7—especially now that the underground is running nonstop. Organized by the hours of the day, this insider's guide gives you the scoop on the most fascinating, delicious, and beautiful things the city has to offer. Discover the unknown nooks and crannies even within the most famous parks, palaces, and museums; find out where to have breakfast or a cocktail; and make the most of London's lively nightlife.

About the AuthorMatt Brown is Editor-at-Large for Londonist and is probably the most London-obsessed person in the world. In the cause of exploring London, he has waded along the buried River Fleet, spent the night in a haunted plague pit, caught a lung infection by climbing Soho's tallest steeple, and walked along the tracks beneath Leicester Square at 2:00 a.m.. Matt has lived in many neighborhoods in the city, but thanks to the capital's obscene property prices, he's since gone into exile in what he optimistically refers to as "The Future London Borough of Elstree and Borehamwood."
