Simon Hadleigh-Sparks : London Through a Lens before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised London Through a Lens:

London is an ever-changing city, blink and one building disappears and another appears bigger, taller, shinier. This is a compilation of photos of now, this moment in time. Ten years from now, how many photos would be the same? This is a photographic moment of the here and now in London and you are invited in to share the moment. Yes, there are hundreds of pictures of the Royal Albert Hall, Trafalgar Square and Buckingham Palace but how many have a feature, an angle, an effect? Something unusual, unique, whilst staying true to the original image. Did you know there was a ship on top of Liberty's? Or that there are three naked golden ladies leaping off the roof in Piccadilly? Use it to imagine you are in London from the comfort of your sofa, or on the train journey home from work.
