Jeanne Oliver : Lonely Planet Best of Dubrovnik before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Lonely Planet Best of Dubrovnik:

I bought this book on Dubrovnik thinking I would be reading about places that only a book on a local scale would list. However, I found my Lonely Planet Croatia guidebook to be equal, if not better, in terms of places to stay, things to see, etc. Effectively, if you've already purchased a Lonely Planet Croatia guidebook, don't bother with this. On the other hand, if you're 100% sure you're only going to Dubrovnik, then this book would serve that purpose sufficiently.

The booklet gives a good impression of the sites to be seen, where to eat and drink and what to do in the Dubrovnik area.

Stroll down Dubrovnik's marble streets and along the ancient city wall for breathtaking views of terracotta rooftops and the grand, domed cathedral. When the splendour of Renaissance architecture weighs too heavily, head for the beaches or hop to a neighbouring island. Back in town, relax on a café terrace as the sun sinks into the Adriatic. Discover Croatia's crowning jewel with this discerning guide. Dine Alfresco on succulent grilled fish, black risotto and regional wine with our comprehensive eating listings. Our Croatia Expert shows you the best beaches, forested islands and reveals the city's hidden gems. Opinionated Hotel Reviews – accommodation to suit every budget in Lapad, the Babin Kuk peninsula or right smack in the Old Town. Hottest Nightlife – we track down the most romantic sea-view cafés, secret local bars and pulsating clubs. Find Your Way with our easy-to-use grid-referenced maps
