Lonely Planet, Carolyn Bain, Cristian Bonetto, Andrew Stone : Lonely Planet Denmark (Travel Guide) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Lonely Planet Denmark (Travel Guide):

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Absolutely terrible
By Real Name
This guidebook was terrible, just terrible. It wasn't shocking that when I read the bios of the authors that they had barely visited Denmark -- just a bunch of young Australians. They missed tons of stuff. The section for kids was basically useless and they completely missed (not even a word) about the Fredericksberg Have which is an amazing and massive park in the middle of the city. The whole book was completely useless and a waste of money. I won't buy Lonely Planet again. 4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Disappointing

By A. Kevin Mccue I haven't read the paper version of this book so I can't comment on that. I bought the Kindle version hoping for a good experience but was sorely disappointed. So much could be done with an e book travel guide with links and photos or even video but none of that really happens here. Mostly text with some illustrations. The maps are abysmal, really horrible. Navigation within the book is difficult. I really can't recommend it. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Finally, improved Kindle versions for LP!
By VN This review is for the Kindle version of the 2012 LP Denmark guidebook. The Kindle versions of our beloved LP guidebooks have been long overdue for improvements! This Kindle version is easier to navigate and more pleasing to the eyes. It's not perfect, but hopefully more refinements will come with time. I purchased three Denmark guidebooks, and this was my go-to guide at almost every turn.

"It is a great looking guide with beautiful pictures, and densely packed with tons of useful information about this small and delightful country." (ScandinavianBooks)
About the Author Amy practiced law in Virginia before moving to Los Angeles to try to break in as a screenwriter. If you listen carefully, you can still hear the horrified screams of her parents echoing through the space-time continuum. After a stint as a writer's assistant on Law Order, she jumped into freelance writing, focusing on travel, food, and the outdoors. She has hiked, biked, and paddled across Southern California and the Southwest. She recently criss-crossed the Great Plains in search of the region's best burgers and barbecue. Her top picks for U.S. adventure include the cables of Half Dome, the South Kaibab Trail to Phantom Ranch, the road to the Racetrack Playa in Death Valley, the Gauley River during dam release, and the doorbell at the Museum of Jurassic Technology. Books authored or co-authored include Lonely Planet's Los Angeles Encounter, Los Angeles Southern California, Caribbean Islands, California, California Trips, USA, USA's Best Trips and Arizona. She has also written for Backpacker, Every Day with Rachael Ray, Lonely Planet Magazine, Redbook, Vegetarian Times, and Women's Health. Amy's essays have appeared in the Los Angeles Times, Southern Living, and the travel anthologies Go Your Own Way and The Thong Also Rises.
