Lonely Planet, Marc Di Duca, Kerry Christiani : Lonely Planet Munich, Bavaria the Black Forest (Travel Guide) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Lonely Planet Munich, Bavaria the Black Forest (Travel Guide):

Very helpful book but difficult to extract the nuggetsBy Stacy BlackI'm giving this 5 stars because it was helpful in preparing for my recent trip to southern Germany. It is not a very easy book to read, and I found myself reading it over again a few times to figure stuff out. Its difficult to connect the places on the map to the descriptions, but it has a lot of information and hidden gems. The restaurant recommendations were not that good. We did better with Trip Adviser and Google. If you have time to decipher this book, it is packed full of helpful stuff. We had an amazing trip.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Nice guidebookBy ShannopinRead this before leaving for Germany. Tore out the chapters we needed for our journey and used them as we traveled in Munich.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Good as a General GuideBy raffaellaHope someday to got to my ancestral homeland in southern Germany. Unfortunately this book doesnt have anything devoted to the tiny town that my great great grandparents came from. But it's very detailed otherwise, has maps and color photos, so it should be helpful.

About the AuthorBorn a mile from the tracks of the Stockton-to-Darlington Railway (the first in the world), Marc has a natural affinity with ribbons of steel. He's been riding the ex-USSR's rails since the late-1990s when a trip from Kiev to Crimea took him through the endless sunflower fields of Ukraine. Thousands of miles later, Marc still loves the ceremony of Russian Railways - buying food for the trip, the provodnitsa who shakes you awake in the morning - and keeps returning for more. Marc has updated and authored several Ukraine and Russia-related titles. When not competing for oxygen with fellow platskart passengers or sleeping off 3am starts in station dorms, he can usually be found in Sandwich, Kent, where he lives with his Kievite wife, Tanya.
