Lonely Planet, Nicola Williams, Kerry Christiani, Sally O'Brien, Damien Simonis : Lonely Planet Switzerland (Travel Guide) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Lonely Planet Switzerland (Travel Guide):

6 of 6 people found the following review helpful. Not too deep, but OKBy pbatchouThe guide covers the usual LP territory: larger city maps, places to stay. As such it serves its purpose. The choice of suggested restaurants is questionable - the guide suggests quite a number of chinese and thai places, rather than local fare. Also, if you're looking beyond a place to stay, and want to learn more about the areas you are going to stay, you'll be disappointed - most places are covered by a few standard paragraphs. Would really suggest the official "myswitzerland" website - it's way much better for planning

I use Lonely planet guide on all my trips. It is extremely useful and has all the detail required for planning trips and while you are traveling. This addition also includes the country Liechtenstein, which was great because on our way from Switzerland to Germany for Oktoberfest we stopped in Liechtenstein (it is an adorable country by the way-worth a trip).

About the AuthorIndian Ocean sunrises, a palm-fringed coastline and an endlessly fascinating cultural mix draw Mary back again and again to East and Southern Africa n the areas she writes most about for Lonely Planet. Originally from the USA, Mary spent her early years in Washington, DC n dreaming, more often than not, of how to get across an ocean or two to more exotic locales. After finishing graduate studies, she set off for several years in Europe. Her fascination with languages and cultures soon led her further south to Africa, where she has spent much of the past two decades living and working all around the continent, including in Mozambique and in Tanzania, where she is currently based. Mary has authored and co-authored many guidebooks for Lonely Planet, including Mozambique; Tanzania; South Africa, Lesotho Swaziland; East Africa; West Africa; and, Egypt.
